"My soul give praise to the Lord"

The people bring to Jesus a 'deaf man' who had an impediment in his speech'. They request Jesus 'to lay his hand on him'. Jesus, respecting the need for privacy, brings the man back to health. The man with no name is now integrated back into his family, community and society. He is no longer marginalised. He opens his mouth and 'speaks clearly'. He regains enthusiasm and encouragement.

When Francis of Assisi saw something beautiful, he was moved to praise the artist of that beauty. Our psalm today is an invitation to see the good deeds of people and to praise God whose grace is to be seen in this goodness.

It is the Lord whose grace motivates people to work for justice, to feed the hungry, to minister to the sick, to teach the blind, to welcome the stranger, to care for the poor.

May our eyes be opened to see their godness and may our tongues be loosened to praise the Lord, the giver of all goodness.

My soul, give praise to the Lord.
