The heart of true justice

History teaches many lessons. The history of God's work of salvation has much to give us.

We learn that God heard the cry of the oppressed slaves of Egypt and brought them out in the great Exodus. Then he gave the Ten Commandments, the Law, to be their framework of just living.

God is attentive to the poor. This is the start of God's work of justice. In like manner, God asks us to be attentive in our turn; attentive to the needs of others; attentive to God.

This attentiveness is the beginning of true justice because it draws us out of ourselves; injustice springs from our self-centredness.

This week we seek to make an exodus from our selfish hearts. But only God can make this great exodus, this great escape, possible. In the justice we seek, responsiveness to God and responsiveness to neighbour are inseparable.

*Lord,
bless all those who are deprived of basic justice
and who are trapped.
Give them the light of hope and help us to be attentive to them.
Release in us the flow of attentive love
for all in need and for the beauty of your Word.
Bless us with the justice which you alone can give.*

Amen
